Winnipeg police are investigating what they're calling a sudden death after a body was found in a West End rooming house Tuesday afternoon.

A police spokesperson wouldn't confirm the age or gender of the person discovered in a two-storey house at 854 Home St. around 12:30 p.m., and stopped short of calling the incident a homicide.

Neighbours say fights and noise are a common occurrence at the home, and many told Metro they heard fighting and yelling about knives late Monday night and into Tuesday morning.

"That house is crazy," said Jerry Peters, who lives directly across the street and said he knows everyone living in the five-suite dwelling.

"People are always coming and going from there."

A section of Home Street was closed to traffic for most of the afternoon. As many as 10 police cars were parked in the front and back of the house while forensic investigators took pictures and officers went door-to-door interviewing neighbours.

After watching five men and a woman being led away from the house by police, Peters told Metro he feared the worst for the only resident he didn't see leave — a woman in her early 40s who he'd gotten to know after she moved in about two weeks ago.

"She was into drugs ... so either she overdosed or something else happened," he said after watching a body being carried out of the house at about 4:30 p.m.

"There were so many things going on in there last night, it's hard to say."

Police didn't release any more details by press time.

Books head into kids' hands

Books in the hands of children who need them most. This message was at the heart of a donation of 48,000 books to children and schools across Manitoba — a gift made possible First Book Canada and Share The Magic.

"This is our very first time distributing books in Manitoba," said Tom Best, executive director of First Book Canada, a nonprofit group that provides new books to programs that serve children in need.

Best, along with Minister of Immigration and Multiculturalism Christine Melnick, made the announcement at the Richilu Distribution Centre on Inkster Boulevard in front of several dozen elated Grade 4 and 5 students from Brooklands School.

As soon as the speeches wrapped up, the children were given three books each to take home and several boxes of books for fellow students and the school.

"It means so much," said Rex Ferguson-Baird, Brooklands School principal. "Any moment we can put good literature in the hands (of students), it means they're going to read."

Ferguson-Baird said his school, located in an area of the city where there are many low-income families, focuses on reading and writing skills.

Jennifer Schmidt, a member of the parent council with a child in kindergarten, said the gift of books is huge.

"There's a lot of kids that don't have books at home," said Schmidt, adding that she was very happy to hear Best announce that there would be another round of free books.

"That's even better because sometimes things happen and it stops so it's nice they'll be back next year."

Share The Magic is a local organization started by Melnick, a former librarian, which donates books to underprivileged children.

New laboratory will mean fewer bodies

Technology. Students can now do rare surgeries by simulation rather than on live people or cadavers

winnipeg@metronews.ca

University of Manitoba med students will now have the opportunity to practice their craft through simulation thanks to a new state-of-the-art lab, called the Surgical Modeling, Simulation and Robotics lab at the Health Sciences Centre (HSC).

Lab Director Dr. Bertram Unger said he is excited for the new lab because students can practice surgical procedures without having to work on people or cadavers.

"Students can practice 40 or 50 kinds of cases that they would only see once or twice in real life," said Unger.

"Now you can practice and build your skills and you can do it on your own without the pressure of working on a real case."

The Faculty of Medicine curriculum has always been based on an apprenticeship model where students shadow doctors, but now thanks to this lab, the ways things are done will change dramatically.

"The classic model is by learning by what comes in the door," said associate lab director Jordan Hochman. "New doctors sometimes work on cases with absolutely no experience. Students will now get more practice and enter the workforce with much more experience."

Most of the funding for the lab came directly from the Faculty of Medicine, while lab space was donated by HSC. Unger hopes the technology will be a fully integrated into the curriculum within a year.

"We're not going fully live with it as curriculum yet, but we hope to do so by the end of the year."

Hearing date set for judge whose nude pics were put online

A hearing date has been set for a Manitoba judge whose explicit nude photographs appeared online.

A panel of the Canadian Judicial Council is to hold a hearing May 19 as it starts an inquiry into Lori Douglas, an associate chief justice of the Manitoba Court of Queen's Bench.

The inquiry is to determine whether Douglas should be removed from the bench, but the initial hearing is over procedural matters, such as who will have standing.

The judge's lawyer husband, Jack King, has already been reprimanded by the Law Society of Manitoba for suggesting to a client that he have sex with Douglas.

King also gave his client nude photographs of Douglas, which ended up on the Internet.

King apologized for his behaviour and said Douglas had done nothing other than privately indulge his strange tastes.

No arrests made yet in robbery

No arrests have been made following two strong-arm robberies in St. Vital Monday that police believe may be related.

Police responded to the 300 block of Paddington Road around 10 p.m. after two unknown males robbed a male youth of property before fleeing southbound on Paddington Road in a grey SUV.

The victim was not injured.

The first suspect is described as a white male in his early teens, 6'0" tall with a medium build, blond hair and blue eyes. He was wearing a white hooded sweatshirt.

The second suspect is described as a white male in his early teens, 5'10" tall with a medium build and busy eyebrows. He was wearing a black hooded sweatshirt.

Then, around 11:15 p.m. five youths in the area of Sandrington Drive and Pear Tree Bay were confronted and assaulted by group of youths.

Fans seeking answers. Stadium update is coming today: Bombers

Officials with the Winnipeg Blue Bombers gave no update on the status of the new stadium at Tuesday's jersey reveal press conference, but one will happen Wednesday.

At the press conference, Winnipeg Blue Bombers director of media relations Darren Cameron asked the media to "keep the conversation about the jerseys," an obvious reference to the recurring questions surrounding the new stadium.

The Bombers issued a press release at 7:30 p.m., asking media to show up at the Investors Group Field Wednesday morning for, presumably, more information on an opening date on the delayed stadium.

At least two season ticket holders said they have been kept in the dark on when the new stadium will be functional and are expressing their frustration with the club.

Michael Thompson, a season ticket holder since 1988, said he never thought the stadium would be ready for the start of the season, but he is frustrated with the lack of communication from the Bombers.

Adam Carriere has had season tickets since the late '90s and he also has expressed frustration with the situation.

"I think they owe the loyal fans some answers," he said. "I've invested a lot of money into this football club over the years, and now I'm just sitting here in the dark with no idea what is going on. Maybe they could take some lessons from True North about communications."

Investors Group Field was originally scheduled to open in April but was pushed back due to construction delays because of high winds. Rumour has it the stadium may now not open until September.

Nesting birds. Falcon Cam to go live today

Winnipeg's most watched pair of endangered peregrine falcons is ready for their close-up once again.

The CBC's popular web-based Manitoba Falcon Cam goes live Wednesday.

Since 1989 a pair of peregrine falcons has nested on the Radisson Hotel in downtown Winnipeg, and starting in 2006 CBC Manitoba and the Peregrine Falcon Recovery Project (Manitoba) installed a live camera next to the nest to broadcast the daily lives of the birds.

"Over the years, nature lovers and classrooms from Manitoba and around the world have watched the falcons hatch and witnessed their growth being nurtured until their eventual flight away from the nest," said John Bertrand, managing director of English radio and television for CBC Manitoba. "We are excited to continue to lend eyes and ears, quite literally to this project, resulting in over 4.4 million page views since its inception."

Bombers hope new jersey is a knockout

Golden boys. The men in Blue and Gold hope these jerseys pack a punch

winnipeg@metronews.ca

The Winnipeg Blue Bombers unveiled their brand new jerseys Tuesday in a boxing ring at the Pan Am Boxing and Athletic Club in downtown Winnipeg.

The location of the reveal was an ode to the late great boxer Joe Louis, for whom the Winnipeg Blue Bombers were named by the late Winnipeg sports writer Vince Leah.

Gone is the lightning bolt that has been a part of the Bombers symbol since the 1990s.

The Bombers will wear a blue jersey at home with gold numbering and shoulders. The colour scheme is reversed for the road jerseys with a solid gold colour.

Gone are the white road jerseys, and many involved with the Bombers are happy to see them go.

Bombers head coach Paul LaPolice says he is a fan of the new look, especially the away jerseys.

"I really like the gold," said LaPolice. "It's great the league allowed us to go with gold as our away colour. They look really sharp. The players have never been fans of the whites. This will be a great look."

Former Bombers great Chris Walby agreed.

"Any time you wear white you are wearing a sign of surrender," said Walby. "You just don't look tough. When the Bombers wore white pants it was a joke. It looks like we should be on Dancing with the Stars, not playing football. This look is tougher."

The jerseys are already on sale at The Bomber Store.

Veteran John Labelle goes through security screening at Federal Court in Halifax in November. A Federal Court ruling that Ottawa should stop clawing back disability benefits from former Canadian Forces members is a key legal victory for some of the country's most injured veterans, their lawyers say. The veterans, who launched a class-action lawsuit against the federal government, argued last November that the benefits were being unjustly clawed back because the payments were unfairly deemed as income. In a decision released Tuesday, Judge Robert Barnes agreed that the monthly Veterans Affairs pensions aren't "income benefits."

End of an era? Cuba mulls ending travel restrictions

After controlling the comings and goings of its people for five decades, communist Cuba appears on the verge of a momentous decision to lift many travel restrictions. One senior official says a "radical and profound" change is weeks away.

The comment by Parliament Chief Ricardo Alarcon has residents, exiles and policy makers abuzz with speculation that the much-hated exit visa could be a thing of the past, even if Raul Castro's government continues to limit the travel of doctors, scientists, military personnel and others in sensitive roles to prevent a brain drain.

Other top Cuban officials have cautioned against over-excitement, leaving islanders and Cuba experts to wonder how far Havana's leaders are willing to go.

Weed-sale ban partially in effect

A policy barring foreign tourists from buying marijuana in the Netherlands went into effect in parts of the country Tuesday, with attention focused on the southern city of Maastricht, where a cafe was warned over violating the ban and around 200 smokers marched in protest.

Weed is technically illegal in the Netherlands, but it has been sold openly for decades in small amounts in designated cafes known as "coffee shops" under the country's famed tolerance policy. Under a government policy change, as of May 1, only holders of a "weed pass" are supposed to be allowed to purchase the drug in three southern provinces. Non-residents aren't eligible for the pass, which means tourists are effectively banned. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Questions still remain over who facilitated bin Laden's stay in Pakistan

Security forces. No answers from Pakistan one year after the U.S. raid that killed world's most wanted terrorist

One year since U.S. commandos flew into this Pakistani army town and killed Osama bin Laden, Islamabad has failed to answer tough questions over whether its security forces were protecting the world's most wanted terrorist.

Partly as a result, fallout from the raid still poisons relations between Washington and Pakistan, where anti-American sentiment, support for Islamist extremism and anger at the violation of sovereignty in the operation can be summed up by a Twitter hashtag doing the rounds: #02MayBlackDay.

The Pakistani government initially welcomed the raid that killed bin Laden in his three-storey compound, but within hours the mood changed as it became clear that Pakistan's army was cut out of the operation. Any discussions over how bin Laden managed to stay undetected in Pakistan were drowned out in anger at what the army portrayed as a treacherous act by a supposed ally.

That bin Laden was living with his family near Pakistan's version of West Point — not in a cave in the mountains as many had guessed — raised eyebrows in the West. The Pakistani army was already accused of playing both sides in the campaign against militancy, providing some support against al-Qaida but keeping the Afghan Taliban as strategic allies.

A week after the raid, President Barack Obama said bin Laden had a "support network" in Pakistan and the country must investigate how he evaded capture. Pakistan responded by announcing the formation of a committee to investigate bin Laden's presence in Pakistan as well as the circumstances surrounding the U.S. raid.

Obama in Afghanistan to sign security deal

President Barack Obama is greeted by Lt.-Gen. Curtis (Mike) Scaparrotti, and U.S. Ambassador to Afghanistan Ryan Crocker as he steps off Air Force One at Bagram Air Field in Afghanistan on Tuesday. CHARLES DHARAPAK/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

U.S. President Barack Obama slipped into Afghanistan Tuesday night on an unannounced visit on the anniversary of the killing of 9-11 mastermind Osama bin Laden. Obama is signing an agreement cementing a U.S. commitment to the nation after the long and unpopular war comes to an end.

The partnership spells out the U.S. relationship with Afghanistan beyond 2014, covering security, economics and governance. The deal is limited in scope and essentially gives both sides political cover: Afghanistan gets its sovereignty and a promise it won't be abandoned, while the U.S. gets to end its combat mission but keep a foothold in the country.

The deal does not commit the United States to any specific troop presence or spending. But it does allow the U.S. to potentially keep troops in Afghanistan after the war ends for two specific purposes: continued training of Afghan forces and targeted operations against al-Qaida, which is present in neighbouring Pakistan but has only a nominal presence inside Afghanistan.

Officials have previously said as many as 20,000 U.S. troops may remain after the combat mission ends, but that must still be negotiated. The United States does promise to seek money from Congress every year to support Afghanistan.

Obama is joining Afghan President Hamid Karzai to sign the agreement that will broadly govern the U.S. role in Afghanistan after the American combat mission stops at the end of 2014 — 13 years after it began.

The chief executive of Research In Motion, Thorsten Heins, stood before the developers who could play a crucial role in the company's future and gave them a first look Tuesday at the new BlackBerry 10 operating system.

The widely anticipated unveiling at its annual BlackBerry World conference centered on some awe-inspiring technological developments sandwiched between pounding club music and a heavy dose of flashing spotlights that could send any raver into a tizzy.

RIM takes blame for flashmob

BlackBerry-maker Research In Motion has admitted their role in organizing an anti-Apple flashmob outside a Sydney, Australia Apple Store last week.

The stunt, which saw dozens of black-clothed people arrive outside the Sydney store in a coach bus and wave "Wake up" signs at Apple customers inside the shop, drew criticism in the blogosphere as an "embarrassing" marketing attempt.

A number of tech-focused websites first pointed the finger at Samsung, the smartphone company known for its Apple-targeted campaigns. But Samsung denied their role in the guerrilla marketing campaign.

MacWorld Australia revealed on April 29 that they found a Double Click URL on a "Wake Up" webpage that had ties to RIM Australia.

The campaign is said to be part of RIM's promotion for BlackBerry OS 10.

THERE ARE NO WINNERS IN THE LINGERIE FOOTBALL LEAGUE

JUST SAYIN'
Paul Sullivan
metronews.ca/justsaying

It wasn't easy, but I'm pretty sure I've discovered the worst idea ever spawned.

If you were going to start a Museum for Morons, this would be the cornerstone: The Lingerie

Football League.

Here's the "concept": teams of scantily clad women play tackle football. There are seven players to a side, and, in addition to shoulder pads and helmets, their uniforms include garters, bras and panties.

As far as I can tell, there are no male cheerleader squads in their tighty-whities, cheering on local favourites such as the Los Angeles Temptations, Lingerie Bowl champs for three years in row, or the Philadelphia Passion, last year's losers.

Here's the thing: The LFL is too stupid to live, at least in the U.S. The league recently announced it has shut down U.S. operations to concentrate on re-opening in April 2013 (remind you of the restaurant that's shut down for "renovations?") In the meantime, the only teams on the field in 2012 will be in — wait for it — Canada.

Apparently there are enough hosers left in the Great White North to watch women humiliate themselves for nothing. The league stopped paying players at the beginning of the 2011 season. If they get hurt in those ridiculous getups, tough. They pay their own health insurance, except in Canada where you and I pay for their health care.

There are four teams set to begin the season: the BC Angels, the Toronto Triumph, and to the eternal shame of Saskatchewan, the Regina Rage and the Saskatoon Sirens. The teams will play eight games, culminating in the Canadian Lingerie Bowl the day before the Grey Cup. The CFL should sue for unwanted proximity.

The sad thing is (but not the only sad thing!) There's a plethora of sad things! that despite the automatic gratuitous titillation that comes with this farce, some of the young women who play the game can actually play, and when asked, would rather play in a serious league that requires clothes. But LFL is the only game in town. Actually four towns. In Canada.

It will be interesting to see if any of these games are actually played. And if they are, if anyone shows up to watch. Even the most dedicated fans of the Rage or the Angels will be hard-pressed to explain where they're going instead of mowing the lawn or power-washing the deck: "Oh, just to watch a football game played by women in their sexy lingerie. Some of the girls can, um, play."

Genie's and Gemini's become one show

Canada's top film and television awards bashes are being combined into a single televised ceremony. The Academy of Canadian Cinema & Television says it is merging annual broadcasts of the Genie Awards, which salute the best in film, and the Gemini Awards, which celebrate homegrown television. Academy chair Martin Katz says the move follows "extensive industry consultation and outreach." The next gala will be a two-hour event on March 3, 2013 airing on CBC-TV. The annual Gemmeaux Awards will celebrate French-language television and digital media on Radio-Canada on Sept. 16, as previously announced. Shows currently eligible for the 2012 Gemini Awards will be part of the academy's new awards show in March 2013.

New Bond film. Javier Bardem wants you to sympathize with his character as he tries to kill James Bond

KIERON MONKS

Metro World News

It's a dirty job trying to kill James Bond, but Javier Bardem does not believe he is the bad guy.

"Actors are the lawyers of our characters and we defend them no matter what," he smiles.

Penelope Cruz's husband is serious when he describes super-villain Raoul Silva as a "very complex character."

Want more bond?

- Website. Go online to metronews.ca/features for our complete look at 50 years of James Bond movies.

His attempt to win sympathy for the devil was inspired by Bruno Ganz's performance as Adolf Hitler in The Downfall.

Bardem already looks bulletproof. In 2007, the 53 year-old became the first Spaniard ever to win an Oscar, for playing psychopathic killer in No Country for Old Men, and his casting opposite 007 confirms his rise to Hollywood royalty status.

"This is only my second commercial movie, the territory is still new to me," says Bardem, who spent most of his career in low-budget, experimental cinema. "But, for me, it's the same. The set is bigger, the money is bigger, but the commitment is the same."

He has enjoyed his duel with "impressive" Daniel Craig, although Bardem did not share his rival's love of the gym, and kept in shape by eating only fish and vegetables. Although happy to play the villain, life-long Bond fan Bardem would not rule out a job swap to wear the tuxedo in future.

"I'm open, but Daniel is doing a great job."

Spoiler alert

Prediction time: Look out for these...

- M dies. A shock as the M16 chief has been with the series since the beginning. Judi Dench has played M for seven films but rumours persist this will be the last.
- Spy feelings. Daniel Craig is credited with bringing more humanity to 007, and he says we "get to know him better" in Skyfall. Part of this involves seeing his home for the first time, and possibly discovering that he leaves all his washing up in the sink.

- The best of both worlds. Key scenes will take place in Asia. Bond will confront villain Silva on the Japanese Island of Hashima, and test his luck in a gorgeously designed Macau casino. But expect plenty of action in London, including an epic chase.

Jessica finally has that baby

THE WORD
Dorothy Robinson
scene@metronews.ca

Although Jessica Simpson didn't have the longest pregnancy in the world, it certainly felt like she did.

Well, the eternal wait ended yesterday with Simpson and her fiancé Eric Johnson announcing the birth (finally!) of daughter Maxwell Drew Johnson.

The baby was certainly well-marinated, weighing in at 9 lbs, 13 oz. But lest Maxwell Drew get all the attention, let's look at which other celebrities popped out a baby while we were all fixated on Simpson's ever-expanding waistline.

• Katherine Heigl and husband Josh Kelley expanded their family and adopted another daughter, according to People magazine.

• It was announced in March that Charlize Theron adopted a baby. "She is the proud mom of a healthy baby boy named Jackson," her rep told People magazine.

The only birth to overshadow Simpson's? Beyoncé and Jay-Z welcoming daughter Blue Ivy Carter in January. Of course, they are our version of royalty, whereas Jessica Simpson is a reality TV star/shoemaker.

Gyllenhaal welcomes baby girl after keeping mum on pregnancy

Maggie Gyllenhaal and Peter Sarsgaard welcomed their second daughter, Gloria Ray, last week, their rep confirms to People magazine. The pair, who married in 2009, also have a 5-year-old daughter, Ramona.

Gloria Ray was born April 19 in New York. Gyllenhaal kept mum on her pregnancy this time around as long as she could.

"I find it difficult to pretend you're not pregnant, which I had to do," she told USA Today in March. "I didn't let anyone know until three-and-a-half months this time. I went to film festivals. I'm throwing up in the bathroom and having to keep pretzels in my purse, and having to fit into dresses."

Last minute booking? There's an app for that

For those times when you suddenly need a hotel room but have no idea where to book, a new mobile app that launched in Canada last Thursday promises to find the best deal for a last-minute stay. According to Sam Shank, there's a multi-billion-dollar business opportunity in offering cut-rate hotel rooms with mere hours to spare. The CEO of the mobile app HotelTonight, now available in Toronto and Vancouver, says there's big money in helping hotels clear out their inventory at the last minute. And he says needing a hotel room with no advance notice is a surprisingly common dilemma, especially among business travellers. "We're going after the spontaneous or last-minute need," says Shank, noting he doesn't recommend that thrifty travellers hold off on booking a hotel until the day of their trip. It's for "people who woke up in the morning and didn't realize they were going to need or want a hotel room. Starting at noon local time each day, users loading up HotelTonight's Apple or Android app can search for offers available that night, with the option of extending the reservation by an additional four nights.

Attention lobster lovers. Three-day crustacean course is just for you

Consumers increasingly want to know where their food comes from and the town of St. Andrews, N.B., is offering lobster lovers some tasty education along with its spectacular scenery.

Imagine taking a three-day course where the curriculum offers the chance to eat lobster and other fresh seafood every meal of the day. If you're now daydreaming about wearing a lobster bib and wiping melted butter from your chin, then the Lobster Lovers Academy might be the place for you.

St. Andrews, on the coast of the Bay of Fundy, is well known for its spectacular views and many seafood-focused restaurants and take-outs. For the last four years, St. Andrews has hosted a lobster academy to educate buyers for restaurants and food chains on everything they need to know about lobsters — from buying them to proper handling and preparation. This year, for the first time, the program is being offered to the general public as the Lobster Lovers Academy.

Participants must apply in advance for the June 7-10 event, which costs $999 per person. That includes three nights accommodation in historic Anderson House, meals (including all the lobster you can eat) and a number of excursions.

Celebrate fresh flavours of spring with roasted fare

Look for local lamb at the market or in stores now as spring is always a favourite time of year to cook it up. This recipe is perfect for a Sunday dinner to share with family and friends.

1. In a small bowl, stir together Dijon, rosemary, garlic and olive oil.

2. Place lamb in a roasting pan and rub marinade over entire surface of the lamb. Roast lamb in the centre of a 190 C (375 F) oven for 60 to 90 minutes or until internal temperature reaches 52 C (125 F) at the thickest point for medium rare. Roast longer for desired doneness. Let lamb rest for 30 minutes before slicing.

3. Walnut Salsa: Meanwhile, in a bowl, stir together chopped walnuts, parsley, mint, anchovies, capers, peppercorns, oil, lemon rind and juice until combined. Spoon over sliced lamb to serve.

The skill switchover

You've got a lot to offer. How to sell your transferable part-time job skills for full-time employment

SASHA RANA

TalentEgg.ca

I've gone through the interview process countless times and I think the most important piece of advice I can offer is: sell your transferable skills.

After graduating from university or college, many of us do not have the experience we need to land our dream jobs. What we do have, however, is a slate full of entry-level positions which may include server, retail sales associate, fast-food worker, and many other so called "useless jobs."

However, one thing that many of us fail to recognize is that the skills you acquire in all of these jobs will help you become successful in your future career.

Imagine this scenario

Your interviewer on one side of the desk flipping through your resumé, saying, "So let's go through your past experiences and what you can bring to the table in this position..." Meanwhile you're on the other side fretting, thinking to yourself, "How am I supposed to highlight my qualifications when I don't have any?" But you do!

Here are a few common jobs students hold, and how to identify transferable skills you can sell to any position:

Server

You're on your feet all day, remembering orders, juggling various tables. This translates to hard working and dedicated, quick learning and an ability to handle various tasks at once. Also constantly dealing with customers of all levels of difficulty builds character and resilience.

Retail sales associate

You deal with many aspects of daily sales operations from point of sale purchases and re-

Your hospitality experience can 'serve' you well in the application process. iSTOCK turns, to organizing merchandise, to assisting customers in finding suitable products. This translates to the ability to multi-task, you have organizational skills, not to mention always maintaining a positive attitude while helping customers choose that perfect item.

Fast-food worker

You work in a small area with a million operations going on at once. You have to ensure customer satisfaction, while working with a number of people in providing tasty food and drinks quickly. This translates to the ability to work in a fast-paced environment while accomplishing several tasks at once. This position also screams team work!

Devils break through in 3rd

NHL. Floodgates open for New Jersey after peppering Flyers' Bryzgalov for 40 minutes

Adam Larsson and David Clarkson scored their first goals of the post-season, and the New Jersey Devils posted a 4-1 win over the Philadelphia Flyers on Tuesday night, evening this Eastern Conference semifinals series at 1-1.

Larsson and Clarkson scored consecutive goals in the third period to rally the Devils past the Flyers and make up for the absence of Ilya Kovalchuk. The Devils played without their regular-season leading scorer because of a lower body injury.

Travis Zajac added a goal to make it 3-1, and Bryce Salvador scored a late empty-netter for the Devils.

Game 3 is Thursday in New Jersey.

Matt Read scored 2:53 into the game to give the Flyers hope they could jump to a commanding series lead. Instead, the offence went into a funk and goalie Ilya Bryzgalov couldn't protect the advance.

Even without Kovalchuk, the Devils did what they wanted against Bryzgalov, taking close shots and dominating the play in the Flyers' zone.

They just couldn't score — until the third.

Bryzgalov was especially stout in the second when he bailed out the Flyers offence with a 12-save period. The Flyers went more than 18 minutes in the period before taking a shot on Martin Brodeur.

"I didn't sense frustration.

We were comfortable with how we played the first two periods," Devils coach Peter DeBoer said. "And it was just a matter of keeping it going in the third, and the goals came."

Bryzgalov had a brutal first five games of the post-season,

Game 2
Devils	Flyers

allowing 20 goals against Pittsburgh. But he shut down the Penguins in the Game 6 clincher — a 5-1 win — and allowed three goals in the Game 1 victory against the Devils.

He appeared to have turned the corner.

Then came the final period. Kovalchuk's injury opened a roster spot for Larsson, a rookie defenceman, to be activated. Larsson was a first-round pick last year, and is just 19-years-old. He had two goals and 18 points in his first NHL season, but had not played a playoff game yet. Larsson's shot from the circle beat Bryzgalov on his glove side early in the third for the tying goal.

"Down a goal, third period, and it was huge," DeBoer said of the rookie's goal. "I feel great for Larsson. He's been out a few games, and he responded."

NHL. Predators pair to sit out for 'selfish' behaviour

The Nashville Predators already face a tough challenge returning home, down 0-2 to the Phoenix Coyotes in their Western Conference semifinals.

Now, they either have something to rally around with forwards Alexander Radulov and Andrei Kostitsyn suspended for Game 3 on Wednesday night or wind up with yet another excuse in this series.

The Predators announced the suspensions Tuesday morning, and general manager David Poile and coach Barry Trotz said the decision to punish the forwards for violating unspecified team rules was easy. The general manager is leaving the decision on whether the pair return for Game 4 on Friday night up to Trotz.

Poile refused to specify what Radulov and Kostitsyn did, saying any hint would give away what they did. He called their behaviour unfortunate and selfish.

Dominant Vanier Cup QB looks to catch on in CFL

Kyle Quinlan enters the CFL draft sporting one of the finest audition tapes in CIS football history.

The McMaster quarterback led the Marauders to a 41-38 win over the defending champion Laval Rouge et Or in a wild Vanier Cup last November, completing 36 of 55 passes for 482 yards and two touchdowns. Quinlan also rushed for a team-high 106 yards.

"He's coming off perhaps one of the greatest performances by a university quarterback in the Vanier Cup," said McMaster coach Stefan Ptasek. "Laval is the premiere program in our nation and their pride and joy is their defence. To throw for 480 yards and rush for 100 is unique beyond unique.

"We'd love to have him back. The question is does the CFL agree with me how unique this kid is and are they going to take a chance?"

Quinlan is waiting for Thursday to find out.

"I have no idea what's going to happen with it," he said. "That's kind of part of the excitement surrounding this week.

During the regular season, Quinlan completed almost 65 per cent of his passes, with 13 touchdowns and just two interceptions. In the playoffs, he was named MVP in the Yates Cup, Uteck Bowl and Vanier Cup.

With a year of CIS eligibility remaining, Quinlan has options. And he could end up in a CFL camp whether he gets

Ovechkin forced to adapt in playoffs

NHL. Capitals captain still providing offence with fewer opportunities

Quoted

"Sometimes, if you're not (out) there, you feel like you're not in (the) game, but if you have 10-second shift or 5-second shift, you just have to go there and do something. It's kind of hard."

Alex Ovechkin after Game 2 in New York.

Alex Ovechkin's ice time keeps shrinking in the playoffs, plummeting to a career-low 13 1/2 minutes in Game 2 of the Washington Capitals' Eastern Conference semifinal against the New York Rangers.

Seems to be working so far. With the series tied 1-1 and shifting to Washington for Game 3, a major topic of conversation is how little the two-time MVP Ovechkin is playing. Despite the reduced action, Washington's captain managed to net the winning goal on a power play in Game 2.

"We don't go down the sheet at the end of the game and say, 'How much did 'Ovi' play?'" Capitals defenceman Karl Alzner said Tuesday. "You know he wants to play more, and he's frustrated by not playing 20 minutes. But he doesn't care — he wants to win that game."

No one on the Capitals has scored more goals this postseason than Ovechkin's three. And he leads the team with six points, too.

But coach Dale Hunter is hiding Ovechkin on the bench for long stretches, especially when the Capitals are trying to protect a lead.

In the regular season, Ovechkin topped Washington's forwards, averaging 19:48 of ice time and 16:08 at even-strength. In the playoffs, he ranks third, and his numbers are down to 19:08 and 15:23.

In Monday night's 3-2 win in New York, Ovechkin's 10:36 of even-strength time was eighth among Washington's 12 forwards — and was nearly six minutes less than Jay Beagle.

"We've got guys like Beagle, (Jason) Chimera and (Matt Hendricks) that are looked at when we're leading in a game to maintain that lead," forward Troy Brouwer said. "Alex knows that, and he has to accept that."

Whether Ovechkin's diminished role is due to an inability or unwillingness to play the safe, defensive hockey Hunter seeks or a result of something else, it's tough to argue with the results.

And now Hunter's Capitals are even with the top-seeded Rangers.

"He's coaching the situations. He's playing certain guys. If we're down a goal, (Ovechkin is) going to be our main guy. He's going every other shift. If we're up a goal, then Dale tends to lean on other guys. That's the way it is," forward Mike Knuble said. "For now it's working and we're going to run with it."

Go ahead, drop the gate

For the most part, pickup tailgates don't have it easy. Rarely, it seems, are they ever gently lowered. Instead they're usually just dropped open, placing considerable stress on the hinges and support cables. That problem is eliminated with the EZ-Down kit from Stabilus. The product consists of a damper that attaches to one side of the bed and connects to the tailgate using the supplied hardware. EZDown has been designed for most domestic and import pickups dating back to the late 1990s. Kits are priced at $70, including a two-year warranty. Check out the installation video at ezdown.com, while the purchasing process can be handled directly at ezdownstore.com.

The under-hood changes will really rock Fusion fans.

Plenty of engine options

The car joins the Hyundai Sonata and 2013 Chevrolet Malibu in abandoning its V6 option, but there are now no fewer than five distinctive engine picks, including two gasoline-electric hybrid systems, as well as front- and all-wheel-drive availability. Price-leading models get a 170-horsepower 2.5-litre four-cylinder engine.

2013 Ford Fusion

- Type. Four-door, front-all-wheel-drive mid-size sedan.
- Engine (hp): 2.5-litre DOHC I4 (170); 1.6-litre DOHC I4, turbocharged (179); 2.0-litre DOHC I4, turbocharged (237); 2.0-litre I4 with electric motor (185 net).
- Base Price (incl. destination): $23,500 (est.).

Plenty of assistance

Ford is also introducing a full assortment of available communications and safety content, such as a keep-you-in-line lane-monitoring system, keep-your-distance adaptive cruise control, confidence-boosting parking spot assist, and a shoulder-check-replacing blind-spot system.

Fuel economy

The 179-horsepower 1.6-litre turbocharged "Ecoboost" engine earns a top rating of 9.0 l/100 km city and 6.4 highway, aided by technology that shuts off the engine when the vehicle is stopped, then instantaneously restarts it once the brake pedal is released. Those are decent numbers, but the fuel-economy leaders are the two hybrid models.

Review. For 2013, there's a whole new bag of tricks, new looks and a plug-in hybrid model. Ford, you have our attention.

Wheelbase Media

The next-generation Ford Fusion is more than a new mid-size sedan; it's really the marriage of high-fashion style with league-leading fuel economy. Oh, and some significant technological treats are also coming along for the ride.

The Fusion's latest power-train array borders on overwhelming, seemingly geared for a world where gasoline prices threaten to reach stratospheric levels.

But if content is king, then the other half of this royal equation is the king's new apparel. The Fusion's January launch at the North American International Auto Show in Detroit, Mich., caused palpable buzz amongst the assembled media. The dramatic sweep of the roofline suggests kinship with the Audi A7, Volkswagen CC and CLS-class Mercedes-Benz, while the open-mouth grille veers 180-degrees from the current triple-bar fixture. Simply put, the Fusion will possibly be the classiest-looking mid-size sedan on the road when it goes on sale in the third quarter of 2012.

The Fusion's high fashion extends to the cabin where passengers are greeted with fancier trim, comfier seats and a freshly pressed control panel. Ford says that passenger space has increased by relocating the dashboard closer to the windshield.

With near-revolutionary improvements in looks and content, Ford appears determined to become the leading innovator within the mid-size sedan pack and at the same time improve its standing in that ultra-competitive segment.

Tempering spring optimism

Autopilot

AUTO PILOT
Mike Goetz
drive@metronews.ca

Some wise person once said, "No winter lasts forever; no spring skips its turn."

The sentiment assumes spring rules and winter drools.

Not saying the assumption is wrong, just that it could be more nuanced. There are dark sides to everything, even to some of the wonderful things wrought by spring.

Pollen, for instance, eventually brings a glorious greening to trees and their ilk, but not before it sneaks en masse into various entry points in my head, and does an Occupy Wall Street in my sinus cavities.

There is also a dark side to the optimism generally associated with spring renewal. While it's possible for everyone to be optimistic, it's not possible for everyone to be on the winning side of whatever they are optimistic about. Just ask Canadian hockey fans. The puck hit the fan so to speak, at every Canadian NHL franchise this spring. And just to mangle that metaphor a bit more, that puck not only got chewed up in the fan, it ultimately killed the fan too, but not before the dying fan spit the puck back and right into the new flat screen TV, which also died an untimely death. Basically, spring equals death.

I'm only in this mood because one my favourite spring car rituals didn't turn out too well this past weekend.

I always look forward to firing up my old Jaguar

Spring is not kind to everyone. Just ask these Toronto Maple Leaf fans. CHRIS YOUNG/THE CANADIAN PRESS every spring, after its long winter slumber. It's always great to once again breathe in its intoxicating mixture of gas, old leather, and oily metal, reacquaint myself with its lovely sheet metal, and hear the engine cough and spurt before smoothing out to a satisfying low and even rumble.

This year there was a large puddle of brake fluid under the Jaguar. Usually there is some, but this was over the top. No brakes.

Oh well, I'll start the engine at least. It fired right up. I tilted the "bonnet" forward to examine the engine while it warmed up. As soon as I did that I could smell raw gas, and then could see gas pouring out of the front carburettor. A stuck float probably. The usual remedy, hitting the bottom of the float bowl gently but firmly with a rubber hammer, didn't work. So then I tried hitting my head with the rubber hammer. That didn't work either.

I shut the engine off.

Instead of that first great drive of the season, I had one big mess to clean up, and two mechanical problems to sort out. And I just spent the first part of the day doing income tax returns.

A lot of renewal happens in the spring, but old cars

I cleaned up the mess the best I could, put the cover back on the car, and went back in the house. Got a beer and watched the end of the Blue Jays game, which just happens to be another spring ritual of mine from time to time, and a much more dependable one too.

This Camry can help you soak up the sun

Second Gear.

2004 to 2008
Toyota Solara

JUSTIN
Drive@metronews.ca

With an attempt at injecting some fun and excitement into the Toyota Camry lineup, the Toyota Camry Solara (Toyota Solara for short) turned the automaker's reliable and well-loved Camry into a two-door coupe or convertible. Intended for shoppers after a more personal motoring experience, the second-generation Solara debuted as a 2004 model, and has now transitioned into used-car territory.

Common issues

Checking out a Solara Convertible? Inspect the roof mechanism thoroughly. Rips, tears, abrasions and duct-tape patches are all bad signs. Inspect the area where the roof stores for signs of rust, mildew or moisture, which could indicate a leak.

Soak the car aggressively in a coin-operated spray-and-wash to inspect for leaks. Some owners have reported leaks through the convertible top, as well as a tendency for water collected on the roof to drip into the cabin when the doors are opened.

Lumpy or sporadic acceleration may be the result of a bad engine sensor, and any hard shifting from the transmission is likely a computer-related issue that requires reprogramming of the gear-box's electronic 'brain.'

TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Engine

Look for four or six-cylinder power with output between approximately 160 and 230 horsepower, respectively, and automatic transmissions all around. All models were front-wheel drive.

What owners like

Most Solara owners rave about relatively generous trunk space, sharp looks, good gas mileage and an easy-to-use convertible top.

A smooth ride, spoiling looks and a comfortable interior round out the package.

What owners dislike

Most owners say the Solara is more set up for touring than sportiness — and that handling is less than inspiring.

A few owners also report squeaks and rattles as the car ages.

Verdict

A well-maintained Solara should prove to be a sensible, relatively spacious and easy-to-live-with machine.

Note that the lighter and less complicated coupe model should offer up better handling and a quieter ride, if you're not dead set on a drop-top.

Tire treads advance with virtual velocity

Driving Force. The road that tires must travel before getting on your car runs through a computer

JILL MCINTOSH
Drive@metronews.ca

The tread on your tires may look random, but it's actually a very specialized design. The grooves and blocks can affect how the tire channels water, how it grips on ice and even how loud or quiet it is.

In the 1900s, tire designers drew patterns with pencil and paper, says Neal Sehm, manager of mold design for Bridgestone Americas in Akron, Ohio.

"That didn't change much until about the 1970s, with the advent of CAD (computer-aided design)," he says.

"Instead of drawing boards, you used a computer to draw what you used to do by hand. It did minimal computations. It just gave you a different tool to do your sketching."

The flat design had to be transformed into 3D, and in the earlier days, this meant hand-carving the pattern into a plaster mold. The next development was computer-aided manufacturing. The design would be programmed into a machine that produced an exact 3D replica with a computer-guided cutting head.

Today, computers can render perfect virtual versions.

"It's actually created in 3D space in the computer," Sehm says. "Drawings are no longer required to design, manufacture or even validate something that you make. We're looking at 3D pictures on the computer, and all the characteristics that you build into that picture are the same characteristics that you want on a tire."

Still, while the computer screen is showing a perfect three-dimensional rendition of a tire, "a lot of people have problems visualizing in 3D space," Sehm says.

An actual rendition of the design is still created, but today, it's likely to be made on a 3D printer. These machines use print heads just as your computer printer does, but instead of ink, they deposit layers of material — plastics, polymer or ceramics — and slowly build up the finished product.

This gives designers the ability to examine the 3D design and determine if they've achieved their goals.

Once the design is good to go, it's off to the next stage of production.

"The big thing is time," Sehm says.

"The bottom line is that when we get done with this, we have a design that we take to market."

♈ Aries | March 21 - April 20.

Wherever you go and whatever you do today, don't be tempted to take your work with you. It will still be there for you later.

♉ Taurus | April 21 - May 21.

You will be romantic today. Surprise the object of your affection with a gift you know will be appreciated.

♊ Gemini | May 22 - June 20. A few kind words from you could make all the difference to someone today. It's time to kiss and make up.

♋ Cancer | June 21 - July 22.

The facts and figures may be on your side but that does not necessarily mean you are going to win the argument.

♌ Leo | July 23 - Aug. 22. Someone you find attractive could have a negative affect on your money situation today. Don't fall for the charm of a pretty face.

♍ Virgo | Aug. 23 - Sept. 22.

Anything routine or predictable will turn you off. Put chores and duties off until another day.

♎ Libra | Sept. 23 - Oct. 22. Is a friend really loyal to you, or is it just an act to get what they want? According to the planets it may be the latter, so be on your guard.

♏ Scorpio | Oct. 23 - Nov. 21. Someone you usually find it quite hard to get along with is trying to be nice to you. End the hostility.

♐ Sagittarius | Nov. 22 - Dec. 21.

You enjoy surprises. That's good, as there will be a flood of them coming your way over the next 24 hours.

♑ Capricorn | Dec. 22 - Jan. 20.

It's not often you get caught up with a new fad or fashion but something has seized hold of your imagination and won't let go. Enjoy it.

♒ Aquarius | Jan. 21 - Feb. 18.

You know when to make a noise about things you don't agree with, and you know this is not the right time to make critical remarks.

♓ Pisces | Feb. 19 - March 20.

A friend will confide in you. You may be shocked by their confession. Offer practical advice. SALLY BROMPTON
